Forever Soulmates

Synopsis

I'm not sure that love is in the cards for me. I used to believe I really wanted to be married. But now that I'm getting divorced from my ex-wife, I'm not sure anymore. Despite being close to her, there was no passion in our relationship. I'm starting to think I may never find someone to fall passionately in love with...But I am really starting to like this Hunter kid. I've been hurt one too many times. After a bad break up and losing my job, it's beginning to feel like my life is falling apart. So when I get an opportunity to dogsit for a recent divorcee, it feels like things might really turn around. The only problem is that this recent divorcee is funny, handsome, and incredibly charming. But I don't want to fall for my straight boss. I can't handle the sting of another rejection. This standalone gay-for-you novel comes complete with a HEA ending!

Customer Reviews

Oh the feels!!!!I fell in love with all 3 characters from the beginning....David, Hunter and Buddy. This book, though everything was a bit fast forwarded compared to other romances I have read, was still so sweet and loving and dedicated to happiness.I loved Hunter, the young male nanny who'd lost his job when the family he was nannying for moved across the state, answered David's ad for a daily in-home dog sitter for Buddy, I really LOVED David, a 35 year old straight guy who had just gone through a divorce from his wife and the way he just decided that he had what he wanted not long after he met Hunter, and nothing or no one was going to tell him different. He knew that the complete apathy in which he had lived his entire life was gone and it was due to Hunter and that was enough for David to know this was "IT". Hunter was really immature in many ways, but he was only 25, so that made sense. I am so glad that David looked past that and knew....just know that Hunter was the person for him, even with absolutely no experience being attracted to a man and that he was going to love him, marry him and have kids with him. No worries and no questions. When Hunter was offered his old job back as long as he moved out of town to be with the family he had originally nannied for, David advised him that long distance could work simply because he saw no reason why it wouldn't if the two of them loved one another as much as they seemed to. Hunter was not so sure and began to overthink the situation as time went on and the visits on weekends were not enough.
