REEL BASEBALL Baseball's Golden Era, The Way America Witnessed It - In The Movie Newsreels

Synopsis

A celebration of the Golden Age of Baseball through the movie-house newsreels that once presented the game's great plays and players to fans across the country. Reel Baseball is an enchanting look back at baseball from 1932 to 1965, a time when major league teams were franchised only in America's biggest cities in the East. Back then, most Americans who witnessed baseball did so in local theaters, where game highlights were shown in the newsreels before the feature film. This handsomely illustrated volume traces the seminal role of newsreels in making baseball the national pastime, before major league teams expanded to the South and West and television brought the game into homes across America. A one-hour DVD accompanies the book and presents the most thrilling moments from these original newsreels. A grand compilation of baseball at its best, Reel Baseball invites fans to both read about and watch on the accompanying DVD such landmark moments as: Lucky Ducky, 1934: Detroiters pelt Ducky Medwick with rotten fruit, but the Cardinals win the World Series; Today's Today, July 4, 1939: A doomed Lou Gehrig brings Yankees fans to tears with his "luckiest man's" speech; Four in a Row, 1939: The latest Yankees juggernaut wins the World Series for its fourth straight title; Old Rivals, August 25, 1942: Babe Ruth and Walter Johnson play in Army-Navy baseball games; One-Armed Outfielder, June 15, 1945: Pete Gray of the St. Louis Browns fields with ease and drills line drives "without a left arm"; Sweet Perfection, October 8, 1956: The Yankees' Don Larsen throws the only no-hitter "a perfect game, no less" against the Dodgers in the World Series; One Last Hurrah, September 26, 1960: Ted Williams caps his epic career with a home run in his final at-bat; One-Upping the Babe, October 1, 1961: His hair falling out because of all the pressure, the Yankees' Roger Maris breaks Ruth's home run record of 60 on the last day of the season; The Eighth Wonder of the World, April 17, 1965: Baseball moves indoors, as Houston unveils the Astrodome, marking the end of the Golden Era. The book and DVD (hosted by baseball and broadcasting legend Joe Garagiola) brilliantly capture the magic of "Joltin' Joe" DiMaggio, the "Say Hey Kid" (Willie Mays), "Stan the Man" Musial, and other legendary players who elevated the boys of summer to the pinnacle of American popular culture.

Customer Reviews

Reel Baseball book a joy to read. Lots of great photos. The DVD is a treasure, it brings back a lot of memories of baseball when I was a kid. Hope there is a DVD part 2.

I bought this for my husband some time ago - he loves it and is an avid reader of sports books.

REEL BASEBALL IS A COMBINATION DVD AND BOOK COVERING BASEBALL WHEN MOST OF THE COVERAGE WAS FROM THE NEWSREELS IN MOVIE THEATRES. THE DVD IS A GREAT COLLECTION OF BASEBALL PRESERVED IN THIS TIMELESS TIME CAPSULE. IT IS A GREAT TRIP DOWN NOSTALGIA LANE. THE BOOK THAT GOES WITH IT IS ANOTHER GREAT TOOL THAT BRINGS THESE GREAT BASBALL MEMORIES TO LIFE. I HIGHLY RECOMMEND THIS FOR ALL BASEBALL HISTORIANS AND FANS OF NOSTALGIA. A GREAT BUY.

what a great deal. perfect condition and great price. my son loved it. thanks!!!!!!!
