Customer Reviews

The Miracle Morning has long been one of my favorite books, and I followed it rigorously to get up early and get as much done as I could before everyone else. But anyone who has tried this system knows it isn't easy. It takes some planning and a commitment; you have to know why you are getting up early or else you'll just hit that snooze button everytime. I have always been a "night owl" too which goes against everything The Miracle Morning is about. But the problem with staying awake at night is that it proves to be the least productive in terms of energy. Our bodies and brains are shutting down. When this happens our default action is to watch TV, surf the Net or eat sugary food to prolong sleep and keep us awake. For writer's especially, the morning can be the BEST time of day to get your writing done. And that is what this book "The Miracle Morning for Writer's" is about. As a writer, the one thing that I have struggled with is the systematic routine to get those words written. I thought that just deciding to write at a certain time of day was enough, and that it would get done. But there were so many things stopping my success. I would wake up early with the best intentions and then, instead of writing, start checking email. Then reply to email. Then check Facebook. Then hit all my likes and make comments on all the posts I was following. Soon my Miracle Morning became my "get up and waste time" morning. This book is packed with so much useful knowledge and actionable content that, it is in and of itself, a course designed to get you [the writer] to take action on your writing and get your book finished. But this isn't just another book on "How to write a book".
