I have never met Pamela Wible. A week ago I had never heard of her. I am a ghostwriter who lives in North Dakota and I was doing research for a book on medical malpractice and I had just googled "physician suicide" and most of what I found was on the topic of physician-assisted suicide. I wanted to know how many doctors commit suicide each year. I found Pamela's website and got lost in her front page childhood story. I printed out the story and popped off a quick email to her and never expected to get a response. Two minutes later she called me. I was speechless. My first thought is that her website must be a scam. Doctors don't return phone calls to strangers, and I've never known a doctor to return a phone call to anyone quickly. We talked and Pamela sent me a copy of her book. I sent her payment in return mail and decided to read the reader praise at the beginning of the book over a cup of coffee. Three hours later I put it down, finished. Pamela Wible is the real thing. There is nothing that can prepare you for her. She writes as I am sure she lives. That explained the phone call. She is wonderfully authentic in a world where everyone is trying to be what they think they need to be. I don't know who I feel more sorry for in today's healthcare world, the doctors or the patients. Healthcare already consumes over 17% of an annual 15.7 trillion dollar economy(you do the math), which makes American healthcare one of the largest industries in the world in terms of real dollars. That means that American healthcare is the hodgepodge result of competing big, Big, BIG high dollar special interests. The only constituency that doesn't make the list at all is the patient.
